Questions for Reflection:

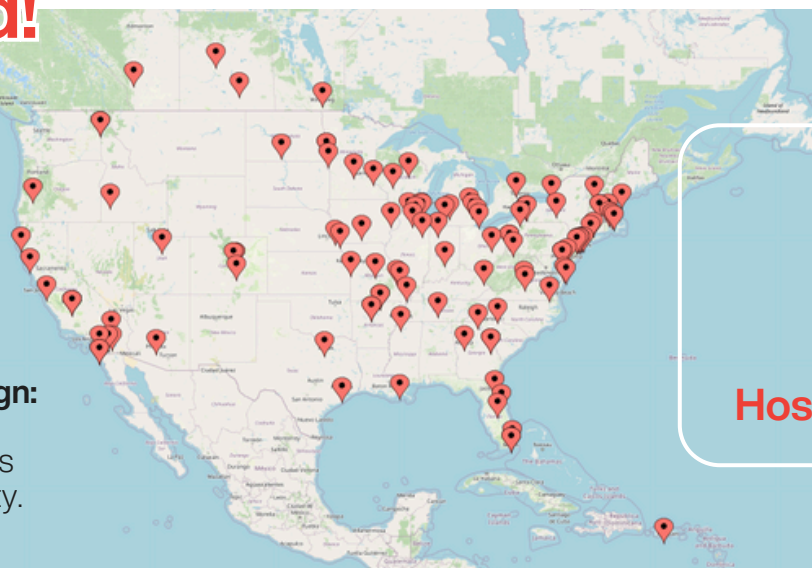

1. Take a minute to just reflect on the movie. What struck you?
2. What emotions came up surrounding the struggling readers represented in the film?
3. Make a list of the words they mentioned. What do these words say about the impact of illiteracy?
4. The film mentions that teachers are not to blame; it is more of a systemic instructional issue. How does this play out in your local context? Do you feel that you have a lot of “dysteachia” going on? What can be done about it?
5. John mentioned that he was able to get passed along because everyone looked the other way. Are we really addressing the reading needs of all students, or are we looking the other way?
6. Literacy is the currency of the 21st century and, as Lacey Robinson said in the film, “No one is coming to rescue us. We’re the ones who are gonna have to rescue ourselves.” She mentions being audacious and bold. How will you be bold in this work?
7. Change requires action. What next step will you take?
